HOW DOMESTIC WORKERS BECOME SLAVES

It was one o'clock in the morning when Mary's employer threw her out into the street, angry that she (1) _____ asked for a day off. "She threw all my things out into the road, but she kept my passport, bank card and national insurance card."

Mary originally came from Africa to Britain. She tells the interpreter that she was (2) _____ frightened to go to the police. "My employer told me that if I said (3) _____, she would tell people that I beat children. I was very scared. All Mary (4) _____ do afterwards was sit in the street and wait for her employer to change (5) _____ mind.

Campaigners say that Mary's story is (6) _____ unusual. Hundreds of women who arrive in Britain each year to clean homes, cook and care for children are turned (7) _____ virtual slaves. The London-based charity Kalayaan is the only organisation in Britain that deals specifically with migrant domestic workers.

From (8) _____ workers the charity saw last year, 59 % said that they had hardly ever (9) _____ allowed out of the house. More (10) _____ half were given no time off at all. Jenny Moss of Kalayaan thinks that extreme mistreatment does happen and sometimes even amounts to torture.
